Harrie Samaras Spoke at Woodcock Washburn LLP

West Chester, Pa. – On December 15, 2009 Harrie Samaras spoke at the Philadelphia offices of the Woodcock Washburn LLP law firm addressing attorneys there and in the firm’s Seattle and Atlanta offices on the topic of “Court Enforcement of Settlement Agreements.” Harrie provided an overview of the law that has developed to govern the enforceability of settlement agreements, and she discussed how that law is evolving particularly when mediated settlements are involved.

For over the past twenty-five years, Harrie has focused the law side of her law practice on intellectual property litigation and dispute resolution as both in-house and outside counsel. Harrie is also an experienced Neutral whose alternative dispute resolution practice includes disputes involving commercial transactions, intellectual property, and business/technology relationships.

Woodcock Washburn was recently ranked in Law360’s 100 Largest IP Practices feature. The Firm was recognized as the forty-fourth largest intellectual property firm in the United States. It has offices in Philadelphia, Seattle and Atlanta.
